THIS COURSE WILL NOT BE FULFILLING A WRITING REQUIREMENT FOR THIS SEMESTER. This course will examine the social ecology of human nutrition using an evolutionary perspective. It will apply the concepts and principles of anthropology to the study of human nutrition and diet. It asks the questions: Where do cuisines come from? Discussions will focus on the origins of the human diet; human dietary adaptation to diverse ecological and technological situations; Social, cultural, behavioral and ecological factors that influence diet in technologically simple, modernizing and contemporary societies; the globalization of food supply and food security; and methodological issues in studying food habits and assessing nutritional status.

Focusing on the United States, this course examines the relationship between law and politics both in general and with respect to specific substantive topics. Substantive topics will include civil liberties (freedom of religion, speech, press, the right to bear arms, the right to privacy), civil rights (equal protection, voting rights), and the rights of the criminally accused. Toward the end of the semester, we will examine in greater depth this last topic & the rights of the criminally accused & by delving into the nitty-gritty inner-workings of the New York lower court system. Through Yale Professor Issa Kohler-Hausmann's book Misdemeanorland, we will peer into the criminal justice experience of criminal defendants and the law and politics involved therein. Following an initial introductory period on legal reasoning, each class will include student presentations of legal arguments using a courtroom format.

Focusing on the United States, this course examines the relationship between law and politics both in general and with respect to specific substantive topics. Substantive topics will include civil liberties (freedom of religion, speech, press, the right to bear arms, the right to privacy), civil rights (equal protection, voting rights), and the rights of the criminally accused. Toward the end of the semester, we will examine in greater depth this last topic & the rights of the criminally accused & by delving into the nitty-gritty inner-workings of the New York lower court system. Through Yale Professor Issa Kohler-Hausmann's book Misdemeanorland, we will peer into the criminal justice experience of criminal defendants and the law and politics involved therein. Following an initial introductory period on legal reasoning, each class will include student presentations of legal arguments using a courtroom format.
