Ego, position in society, love for family, respect (for others and oneself), violence (self-inflicted and toward others), and cultural arrogance ; these issues and concepts, plus a host of others, were as familiar and important to the Greeks and Romans as they are for us today. One important source material Greeks and Romans could turn to as a mechanism for addressing these concerns was myth. In this course, we will read various works by Homer, the lyric poets, Aeschylus, Sophocles, Euripides, Ovid, and Vergil, all of whom rely on myth as the mechanism for investigating and answering the basic question of what it means to be a human being functioning within the framework of a seemingly restrictive society in a seemingly meaningless natural world. By studying the various treatments of myth, we will see how myth was deliberately manipulated to entertain, instruct, and, on occasion, even hoodwink the citizenry.

One of the primary objectives of the course is to provide students with the opportunity to integrate the theory and concepts of their communication and related courses with their on-site experience in a professional environment. To register for the course the students must be preapproved for an internship by one of the communication department advisors. The internship itself must meet certain department requirements. The purpose of the seminar is to allow students to compare/contrast their experience with their peers. It is also an opportunity for students to discuss any issues or concerns relevant to their experience on-site with the instructor and receive any necessary guidance. Class/internship requirements: 12 to 15 hours on-site; provide a weekly email progress report; develop a professional resume and portfolio; complete a written evaluation of the experience. Grading is S/N. Students whose schedules prevent attendance at seminars are required to meet with the instructor regularly.

Ancient tombs, crypts, frozen bodies, mummies, and graves have long been the stuff of adventure and fiction. Yet archaeological investigation of the causes of death in the past, and how ancient peoples dealt with the dead, can tell us much about life in the past. This course will explore two topics: how archaeological study of human burials can reconstruct past deathways (mortuary practices, including treatment of the corpse and funerary rites); and (2) what the archaeological dead can reveal about health and diet in past populations, social dynamics, worldview, and the role of funerals (and the dead) for the living.

This is an introduction to the various disciplines that have been brought to bear in the study of humans and other primates. The course will have an evolutionary perspective as we review living primates (distribution, features of behavior and morphology) and their fossil histories. Particular attention will be paid to how humans have come to look the way we do.

This course will explore the expression of human sexuality across a diversity of cultural and social settings. It will include discussions of how human groups manage sexuality and human reproduction; theories concerning the development of different marriage, family and household systems as they relate to human sexuality; differences in values and expectations related to sexuality in different cultures; the development of sexual expression across the life span in different cultures; and approaches to understanding heterosexual and homosexual relationships and sexual violence.

This course is designed to introduce students to cultural anthropological methods and concepts that are useful for gaining a better understanding of human diversity. We will examine such topics as family systems, economic and political change, religion and ritual in order to encourage students to question commonly held assumptions about what is "normal" and "natural" in human experience. Films, videos and slide presentations will supplement texts and lectures.

This course will examine the social ecology of human nutrition using an evolutionary perspective. It will apply the concepts and principles of anthropology to the study of human nutrition and diet. It asks the questions: ¿Where do cuisines come from? Discussions will focus on the origins of the human diet; human dietary adaptation to diverse ecological and technological situations; Social, cultural, behavioral and ecological factors that influence diet in technologically simple, modernizing and contemporary societies; the globalization of food supply and food security; and methodological issues in studying food habits and assessing nutritional status.

This course will survey the major achievements of ancient Roman civilization. Arranged on a topical basis, the readings and lectures will cover Rome's claims to ties to the heroic Bronze Age, its ideals, the realities of life, the characteristics and events that led to its emergence as a world power, and a survey of its intellectual and artistic achievements. Although the social, political, and military background will not be neglected, the chief emphasis will be placed on those aspects of Roman civilization that have retained a perennial significance for Western societies, and which serve as examples of what it means to be a civilized society.

Our subject will be the traditional stories--myths, legends, and folktales--of the Greeks and Romans. Traditional stories are ones that, by virtue of some compelling attraction, manage to survive from generation to generation, so our main task will be to discover just what that 'compelling attraction' was. The creation of the universe, the first woman Pandora, the Twelve Gods and Goddesses, the theft of fire by Prometheus, Helen and the Trojan War, the foundation of Rome by Aeneas, and Ovid's fanciful metamorphoses are examples of the stories from our modern illustrated reader Classical Myth by Barry B. Powell. By way of providing a context for our stories, the instructor will also devote much attention to such topics as popular belief and superstition, cult rituals, sanctuaries of the gods, oracles and prophets, the conceptualization of male and female, sexuality, and the social and cultural basis of myth in general. Throughout, we shall examine the many theories about the meaning of traditional stories from antiquity down to our own day.

This course will survey the history of ancient Greece from the Minoan civilization in the second millennium BC to the end of the Classical Period in the 4th century BC. We will investigate the major political, intellectual, economic and social factors that contributed to the nature and development of Greek history. We will pay particular attention to the Golden Age of Athens in the 5th century BC and its relations with the Persian Empire, Sparta and the other Greek city-states. Also, we will look at the many political and cultural institutions that combined to make this age unique. Finally, the course will close with the Greek's efforts to cope with the rising power of Macedon.

Req. Room Characteristics: (1), PeopleSoft - Scheduled (PS)(1) Rhetorical Process is an introduction to the study of rhetoric as persuasive communication and to its function in society. The objective of this course is to give students a sense of the significant role that rhetoric plays socially, politically, and culturally, and to introduce students to a variety of traditional and contemporary approaches to the analysis of rhetorical action. Rhetoric as persuasive communication is used in political speeches, public arguments, news reporting, public relations, editorials, advertising, music, resistance movements and other forms of oral, visual, and textual appeals to the public. In this course, we will learn the origins of the study of rhetoric, how to recognize it in action, how to apply it to create persuasive arguments, and how to use it in interpreting the messages we receive in everyday life. Evaluation by objective midterm and final exams, recitation performance, and reading response paper.

This course has two objectives: First, giving students hands-on experience responding to public policy issues by analyzing micro data (large scale datasets covering demographic, economic and social attributes of a population). Second, providing students a level of intuition regarding appropriate tools for each level of analysis, and be able to criticize results of inappropriately used tools. Students will briefly be introduced to survey design and implementation, and engage in data management (data cleaning, dealing with outliers, duplicates, missing variables, modifying, reshaping, collapsing, combining, etc.).

This course is designed to provide students with a practical overview of the professional practice of journalism, while venturing outside of the 24/7 news cycle to explore slower forms of creative nonfiction & literary journalism, travelogue, personal essay, memoir, and criticism. We will discuss the nonfiction art of storytelling: how to shape facts into an engaging story while drawing on the narrative devices of fiction. Readings will center on cross-cultural encounters in Asia and the Middle East, including lesser-considered places like Hong Kong, North Korea, Kashmir, Libya, Egypt, Syria, and Iran.

LOCATION: NANTES FRANCE (THROUGH STUDY-ABROAD) This intermediate, three hour-per-week course builds on the skills acquired during the first year of study while further developing linguistic and sociolinguistic competence in French. Because the focus is on communication, the course is taught entirely in the target language. Course objectives for French 0103 are as follows: 1) speak French well enough to ask and answer questions in various situations beyond what is needed to simply "survive" in a francophone culture, i.e., the ability to talk about self and surroundings in some detail; 2) understand enough spoken French to grasp main ideas and some supporting details in short conversations related to topics above; 3) read well enough to understand principal themes and most details in simple literary and non-literary texts; 4) write longer and more cohesive paragraphs; 5) cultivate a deeper understanding of French-speaking cultures; 6) gain a better understanding of how French works as a language. Learn Italian in a comfortable and interactive classroom environment! This beginners class (max. 19 students) will teach you the basic vocabulary and grammar you need to navigate Italian culture, history, and society. Our innovative class format consists of face-to-face class meetings (3 days per week) in which students practice their Italian in communicative activities. An additional credit hour is online, and students use this time to watch/listen/read lectures, complete exercises to hone their linguistic skills, and interact with apps and websites (Extempore, Quizlet, etc.) to better their Italian. In addition, students will learn about Italian culture, including Italian university life, Italian geography, popular and less-common travel destinations, and Italian cuisine and foodways. No prerequisites! NO TEXTBOOK REQUIRED.

German Reading 1 is an intensive course designed for students who need to read German for their research or who are preparing for a departmental reading exam. It requires no previous German knowledge and is conducted entirely in English. Students will acquire a basic vocabulary for reading, learn about all the fundamental grammatical structures of German, and develop reading strategies for understanding German texts from various disciplines (students' specific interests will be taken into consideration).

German Reading 1 is offered entirely online, using Canvas, and will consist of a combination of online and off-line activities, participation in weekly online meetings and online discussions, as well as individual and peer translation assignments.

This is an elementary language course for students who have not previously studied any German. In this proficiency-oriented course students begin to learn how to communicate in German. This course meets three hours per week, and students are expected to study regularly on their own to keep up with the material. The course emphasizes all four skills: speaking, listening, reading, and writing, and introduces students to the culture of the German-speaking countries. Students will be working towards the A1-Exam of the Goethe Institut, which follows the Common European Framework of Reference and is accepted worldwide. Students should plan to take 0102 during the following semester.

This course introduces students to both a wide selection of Indo-European folktales as well as numerous perspectives from which to understand these folktales. We will examine the aesthetic, social, historical, and psychological values that these tales reflect. In addition, we will discuss significant theoretical and methodological paradigms in the field of folklore studies, including structural, socio-historical, psychoanalytic, and feminist perspectives. Finally, we will analyze the continuing influence of this folk tradition on popular and high culture of our time. Upon completion of this course, the students should be familiar with a wide variety of Indo-European folktales, be able to discuss several approaches to studying them, be able to identify the most important motifs of these tales, be familiar with some of the most influential folklorists, writers, and editors of the tales, and be able to assess the significance of folktales for contemporary western culture. This course satisfies General Education requirements for Literature and Specific Geographic Region in the School of Arts and Sciences

Course Description for Summer 2197: This course addresses critical issues in the history of painting, sculpture, photography, and architecture from the mid-19th century to the late 20th century. The first weeks will be devoted to discussion of the history and cultural practices of artistic Modernism with special attention to the work of the Impressionists, the Surrealists, and the Abstract Expressionists among others. The second part of the course will explore the significance of feminist and multicultural challenges to the Modernist tradition and the role of those challenges in the profound redefinition of Western culture unfolding in our society today.

In this course, we will survey the causes, conduct and conclusion of World War II in Europe. We will emphasize such topics as nationalism, racism, and propaganda and their roots in the nineteenth century. We will talk about the development of the modern armaments industry and arms races as they played out in the era before the Second World War. We will explore models of conflict and peace that have defined debates about international relations for the past two hundred years, and we will see how these ideas influenced international competition, alliance systems, the establishment of the League of Nations, interwar appeasement, and the foundation of the United Nations. We will think about wartime dynamics, spending time examining the changing ideals of war and relating these trends to technological development and growing industrial capacity on the one hand, and changing social and political attitudes on the other hand. We will seriously engage the topic of the relationship between culture and war by reading many types of sources, by examining images and films and even architecture, and by listening to radio addresses and viewing newsreel footage. In addition to discussing battles in the European theater and exploring the experiences of the soldiers in battle, we will think about the impact of war on civilians and the role of civilians during war, in resistance and in collaboration. We will talk about the origins and experience of the Holocaust, and about guilt, responsibility and memory. Throughout the

Ethical dilemmas in the practice of health care continue to proliferate and receive increasing attention from members of the health care profession, ethicists, policy makers, and the general public as health care consumers. In this course we will examine a number of ethical issues that arise in the context of contemporary medical practice and research by analyzing articles and decision scenarios. Topics to be covered include the physician-patient relationship; informed consent; medical experimentation; abortion; responsibility; resource allocation; animal rights; race-based medicine; and health care reform. Students who successfully complete this course will be able to identify and analyze different philosophical approaches to selected issues in medical ethics; have gained insight into how to read and critically interpret philosophical arguments; and have developed skills that will enable them to think clearly about ethical questions as future or current health care providers, policy makers, and consumers.

The goal of this course is to have you gain some familiarity with the methods and subject matter of philosophy by looking at a series of classic questions: Do we have minds or souls that are distinct from our bodies? What does it take for us to survive, and why does it matter to us? Is justice rational? Or equivalently: is the wise person also just? Should we fear death? Readings are drawn from historical and contemporary works. An effort has been made to include a few resources from non-Western philosophical traditions. The texts will be posted on the course website.

This course is an introduction to ancient philosophy; it will acquaint the student with some of the most important ancient Greek, Chinese, and Indian contributions to the philosophical and scientific tradition. We will examine a broad range of central philosophical themes, such as courage, democracy, friendship, justice, virtue, happiness, death, and the nature of language. Some of the philosophy we will be reading includes: Plato, Aristotle, Confucius, the Dao De Jing, early texts of Madhyamaka Buddhism, and Epictetus.

Our primary goal will be to understand these philosophers; characteristic methods and views, and (more importantly) their reasons for holding these views. In the process of exploring these ideas, we may find ourselves shocked, confused, or outraged. This is especially important because by understanding why we agree or disagree with certain ideas, we will be able to more clearly articulate our own views, and then we will have to justify them. That is, we will not merely be studying the history of philosophy; we will be doing it.

We have all been taught that we should do such things as keep our word and refrain from stealing and cheating, even when we could get away with it. But is there actually good reason to do such things, or is morality really just a kind of superstition or fraud? And how can we determine what morality requires of us in more complicated cases? In this introductory course, we will grapple with these questions with the help of classic and contemporary philosophical texts.

This course will introduce students to political philosophy by way of focusing on three topics which are both central to political philosophy and of current political importance: immigration, punishment, and domestic economic justice. We'll ask questions such as: Do states have the authority to control immigration, punish people for their crimes, and regulate economic activity? And if they do have this authority, how should it be exercised? Emphasis will be placed on students developing the ability to charitably reconstruct and critically assess arguments for answers to these questions.

We all reason. Sometimes we reason to convince others of things; sometimes we reason to figure something out for ourselves. Some of our uses of reason are good and some are bad. Some kinds of good reasoning we call "logical"; some kinds of bad reasoning "illogical". This course explores some traditional accounts of what we might mean by calling good reasoning "logical" and bad reasoning "illogical". In particular, we will devote a substantial amount of time to what is called "propositional logic" and "first-order logic". These are formal systems for modeling the behavior of logical words like "and", "or", "if... then", "not", etc. Exploring these formal systems should prove not only useful for more critically evaluating arguments, but, since principles of these systems are widespread in mathematics, computer science, and other formal disciplines, this course may also prove useful for those disciplines as well. For the same reason, the material covered in this class can be useful for e.g. LSAT prep. This course fulfills the Dietrich School General Education Requirement in Formal and Quantitative Reasoning.

This course introduces students to Russian fairy tales, a fascinating and productive genre of folklore that reveals a great deal about Russian traditions and modes of thought. Taking a psychological approach to the materials, the course examines not only the tales, but also the beliefs informing the magic world of these narratives. Since the humans, spirits, and beasts populating this world are richly portrayed in Russian art, a significant component of the course will consist of visual and audio representations of figures and scenes from fairy tales. We shall examine slides of posters, paintings, book illustrations, postcards, etc., and shall listen to music based on characters, situations, and narratives drawn from the tales (e.g., extracts from Glinka, Rimsky-Korsakov, Chaikovsky, and Mussorgsky).

 This course will introduce students to the application of mapping community data to inform decisions at the municipal level. The ability to problem scope, analyze and think critically about complex local issues is critical to the successful application of GIS to decision making by local groups/ actors including Community Development Corporations (CDCs), neighborhood associations, resident associations and planning groups using different types of community data. Throughout the course, students will explore real world scenarios involving real stakeholders using local data and GIS to make decisions and practice planning. Students will be expected to engage with community stakeholders and data about technical and non-technical issues to complete exercise and projects. The course will primarily use ArcGIS Desktop, Microsoft Excel, and Carto online mapping software.

Pre-req: Introduction to GIS or similar vector-based GIS experience. Students should have a basic familiarity with Excel.

Archaeologists study the material remains of past cultures. These past cultures are fascinating in their own right, but on a more fundamental level, they help us understand how human societies work and how they change over time. In this course, the practice of archaeology - the history of archaeological research, theoretical approaches in archaeology, and archaeological methods - will be interwoven with a basic overview of prehistory. Special emphasis is placed on some of the most compelling questions about our past: How did humans evolve? How did our nomadic hunter-and-gatherer ancestors become sedentary farmers? Can we explain why social inequality first arose, and how it became entrenched? How and why did ancient civilizations emerge, and why did they collapse?

Covering a thousand years of ancient Greek culture, this course will survey in roughly chronological order the major achievements of the ancient Greeks. The readings and lectures will start with epic poetry's presentation of Bronze Age heroes, and then move on to the literary innovations of the Archaic Age. Next, the cultural disparities of Athens and Sparta will highlight our survey of the Classical Age, the high point of ancient Greek civilization. Although social and economic aspects will not be neglected, the course will focus on those aspects of ancient Greek civilization that have retained a perennial significance: its literature, politics, historical writings, philosophy, art, and architecture.

Combined Section ID: 0006(CLASS/1220/HIST/1781) - HIST 1781(#10394)

This course is a survey of Roman history from the founding of the city of Rome in the 8th Century BCE to her zenith when her reign stretched from Britain in the West to the Tigris and Euphrates in the East and, finally, to her gradual overexpansion, mismanagement, and decline. This class will investigate Rome's transition from monarchy to republic and how Julius Caesar and a bloody civil war pushed control of the state into the hands of an emperor. As we read a modern narrative history of Rome along with the works of ancient historians, we will examine how she acquired and governed her empire; under what forms of government and under whose leadership the affairs of the Roman People were administered; and what causes led to the breakup of the Roman Empire. Simultaneously, we shall discuss how the idea of Rome still exists today and how Roman influences continue to pervade and influence our modern culture. Class time will be devoted to lecture, visual presentations (slides, videos, Power Points), as well as possibly student reports.

One of the primary objectives of the course is to provide students with the opportunity to integrate the theory and concepts of their communication and related courses with their on-site experience in a professional environment. To register for the course the students must be preapproved for an internship by one of the communication department advisors. The internship itself must meet certain department requirements. The purpose of the seminar is to allow students to compare/contrast their experience with their peers. It is also an opportunity for students to discuss any issues or concerns relevant to their experience on-site with the instructor and receive any necessary guidance. Class/internship requirements: 12 to 15 hours on-site; provide a weekly email progress report; develop a professional resume; and portfolio; complete a written evaluation of the experience. Grading is S/N. Students whose schedules prevent attendance at seminars are required to meet with the instructor regularly.

What comes to mind when you think of the Arctic? What landscapes does your imagination travel, whose faces do you see? In this course, we will turn to local experts to challenge and expand our understanding of the North. Rather than exploring the Arctic through the lens of outside perspectives, we will engage with texts created by Alaska Native and Inuit writers, artists, dancers, and musicians. As we explore the manners in which stories of self and community are expressed, we will practice telling our own stories to examine who we are (and are becoming) and the communities to which we belong.

As a continuation of French 0101, this three-credit course introduces students to the French language, building on skills gained in French 0101. Culturally-contextualized comprehension and production abilities in both written and spoken form are stressed. Because the focus is on communication, French 0102 is taught entirely in the target language. Objectives are similar to those in French 0101, but expanded for this more advanced level. TAUGHT IN FRENCH

Learn Italian in a comfortable and interactive classroom environment! This is the second of a sequence of three classes that are designed to teach you the basic vocabulary and grammar you need to navigate Italian culture, history, and society. Our innovative class format consists of face-to-face class meetings (3 days per week) in which students practice their Italian in communicative activities. An additional credit hour is online, and students use this time to watch/listen/read lectures, complete exercises to hone their linguistic skills, and interact with apps and websites (Extempore, Quizlet, etc.) to better their Italian. In addition, students will learn about Italian culture, including Italian fashion and design, travel destinations, popular culture, and contemporary literature. NO TEXTBOOK REQUIRED.

German Reading 2 is an intensive 4-credit course designed to help students obtain an intermediate reading knowledge of German. Students will advance their existing reading vocabulary, review essential grammatical structures of the German language, and develop strategies to read, understand, and translate, with the help of a dictionary, unedited texts of moderate length and difficulty from various disciplines.

The course is appropriate for students who need German reading comprehension skills for research or are preparing for departmental foreign language exams. The prerequisite for this course is either German Reading 1 and/or permission of the instructor.

German Reading 2 course is offered entirely online, using Canvas, and will consist of a combination of online and off-line activities, participation in weekly synchronous meetings and online discussions, and individual and peer translation assignments.

This course is for students who have successfully completed German 0001 or German 0101, or who have placed into the course on the basis of the department placement test. This course meets three hours per week, and students are expected to study regularly on their own to keep up with the material. The course emphasizes all four skills: speaking, listening, reading, and writing, and continues to introduce students to the culture of the German-speaking countries. Students will begin to work towards the A2-Exam of the Goethe Institut, which follows the Common European Framework of Reference and is accepted worldwide.

Course Description for Summer 2197: This introductory course, designed for students with no previous background in art or art history, undertakes a broad investigation of how art objects function in human culture. The course demonstrates some of the basic tools of analysis with which to approach works of art as material and aesthetic objects, while also examining them as productions that operate in diverse historical and social contexts. The course also focuses on cultural difference and the ways in which art has been employed to define communities as radically particular while also answering basic human needs that connect people living in different times and places.

This course is an introductory survey of world history, by which is meant an overview of major processes and interactions in the development of human society since the development of agriculture some 10,000 years ago. It is a selective overview, emphasizing large-scale patterns and connections in political, social, cultural, technological, and environmental history, yet it also provides balance among regions of the world. It encourages students to apply historical techniques to issues of their own interest.

Ethical dilemmas are a perennial aspect of health care provision and research. They constitute a major concern not only for professional ethicists but for members of the health care profession, policy makers, and the general public. In this course, we will examine some of the most pressing ethical issues of contemporary medical practice. Potential topics include abortion, euthanasia, resource allocation, and health care reform. Students who successfully complete this course will be able to (a) identify and analyze different philosophical approaches to such issues and (b) articulate their own position in light of existing philosophical positions and arguments.

Room Characteristics: PeopleSoft - Scheduled (PS)(1)

In this course, we will study conceptions of human nature and the mind from Early Modern philosophy to contemporary projects in the cognitive sciences and artificial intelligence research. In particular, the course will focus on four questions: (1) What is the relationship between minds and the world, and how does this inform thought about human nature? (2) What role does technology play in shaping human nature? (3) In what sense can machines have minds or count as human beings? (4) What can the sciences reveal about the concept of human nature, and are the findings of the sciences in tension with the discoveries of the humanities? By the end of the course, students will have become familiar with central concepts and arguments in the philosophy of mind and conversant in the discourses surrounding the concept of human nature and its relationship to technology and the disciplinary differences between the sciences and the humanities in answering questions concerning human nature."

In this course we will survey works of four influential philosophers from the early modern period: Descartes, Locke, Hume, and Kant, with emphasis on Descartes and Hume. The early modern period of Western philosophy spans the 17th and 18th centuries; it was inspired and shaped by radical intellectual shifts that accompanied the Scientific Revolution. The emergence of modern science and its experimental methods occasioned many new philosophical problems concerning our knowledge of and place in nature. What am I? Is there anything of which I can be certain? Can our newly emerging scientific knowledge of nature be put on sound philosophical footing? What is the principal source of knowledge? Is all knowledge gained through experience? Or is some knowledge innate? How do I know that the future will resemble the past and that the laws of nature won't change tomorrow? How is it that I know so much about the world that goes beyond what I'm perceiving right now? In this course we will explore some of the greatest philosophers; attempts to grapple with these questions. To this day, these questions turn out to be difficult and critical reflection on them not only can deepen our understanding of ourselves and our place in this world, but can also help develop our skills to think critically and carefully.

PHIL	0220	1010	20054	INTRODUCTION TO EXISTENTIALISM	Lecture	3

Room Characteristics: PeopleSoft - Scheduled (PS)(1)

Existentialism focuses on the existence and experience of the individual. In this introductory level course we will discuss several existentialist themes: What does it mean to lead an authentic life? To what extent does what I am depend on what I choose to do? Am I alone responsible for my decisions? What is the ground of my existence? We will trace these themes in the writings of several major authors, such as Kierkegaard, Nietzsche, and Sartre. We will explore the intimate connection existentialism draws between philosophy and literature, the feminist existentialism of Simone de Beauvoir, and the African existentialism of Frantz Fanon and Frederick Douglass. Existentialists share the conviction that the subject matter of philosophy is urgent and deeply personal: the questions existentialists ask, and the answers they give, shape every aspect of their lives. As such, this course is an invitation to participating individuals to be open to the impact the study of existentialist thought may have on their own lives.

'Bodies and Experiences'. This course is about bodies, and about the experiences that we have in virtue of those bodies. Through our body and how it 'feels', we relate to the world, to other people, and most importantly to ourselves. We will learn to appreciate the role bodies play in both the public and private spheres of our lives, and to gain insight and perspective into a variety of issues based on it. Issues we'll discuss include playing a sport or performing some other kind of skilled activity, having a physical or cognitive disability, or our relationship with food and body size. We will understand how subjective experiences change depending on our race, gender, sex, and sexual orientation, and the effects such experiences have on our social lives. We will learn what makes a question distinctly philosophical and what methods philosophers follow to answer it. But most importantly, we will learn to be O.K. with the fact that there might be no true answer at all.
